WHITE CHOCOLATE MATCHA BARK

YOU WILL NEED

- 12 oz good white chocolate, chopped or in chips
- 1 ½ tsp ground cardamom seed
- 1 Tbsp Firepot Ceremonial Matcha powder or 3 Tbsp Firepot Amai Matcha
- ¾ cup freeze-dried raspberries

TO MAKE

1. Line an 8-inch by 8-inch pan with wax or parchment paper. Let plenty of paper hang over the edges so you can easily lift the bark once it is set.

2. Place two-thirds of the white chocolate in a double boiler or a stainless steel bowl placed over a pot of steaming water (medium high heat), stirring constantly until melted (5-10 minutes or 111 degrees if you have a candy thermometer and want to temper your chocolate so it stays shiny and snappy, and so it doesn’t bloom). Don’t let the bottom of the bowl touch the water (it might scald the chocolate) or water get into the bowl (it might curdle). After step 3, if you are tempering your chocolate, do a smear test to see if the chocolate is in temper: smear a little of the melted chocolate on wax paper or a marble countertop. If it is nice and shiny, it is in temper. If it is cloudy, it is not. If it’s not, go back to 111 degrees and take it from there.

3. Add the rest of the white chocolate and continue stirring until it is 88 degrees or a little cooler than body temperature.*

4. Sift the matcha and cardamom into the chocolate and stir until smooth.

5. Pour the chocolate into your lined pan, evenly sprinkle the dried raspberries over the top and gently press them into the bark.

6. Once it has cooled, you can cut or break the bark into pieces and keep it at room temperature for 2-4 days if you didn’t temper your chocolate or a week or more if you did.
